

Do Your Client Relationships Outrun Your Delivery Capacity?

01

Routing Logic

How to match client problems to the right ESource business

02

The Process

Six steps from recognition to delivery handoff

03

The Guardrails

Approved language, authority levels, and hard limits

You bring the relationship. ESource brings the capability.

Two Businesses. One Standard.

ESource operates two distinct businesses. Understanding the difference is the foundation of every routing decision you will make as a partner.

ESource AI Group

- Delivers defined AI products
- Learning solutions and seller-readiness programs
- Structured, product-led engagements

ESource Execution Partners

- Tool-agnostic AI advisory and execution
- Diagnosis-first methodology
- Flexible, problem-led engagements

The Core Principle

These are not interchangeable. The client's problem determines the path — not the size of the deal, not partner preference, not what sounds more impressive in a pitch.

ESource AI Group vs. ESource Execution Partners

The two businesses serve different client needs. Routing correctly requires understanding what each business is built to do — and what it is not.

ESource AI Group

- Defined products with clear scope
- Seller-readiness programs
- The Product Launcher

ESource Execution Partners

- Crash Test methodology
- AI CrashScan diagnostic
- Diagnosis before prescription

The Routing Center

⊗ Never blend the two businesses to build a larger-sounding offer. The client problem in the center drives every routing decision.

The Routing Rule

Diagnose Before Prescribing

Understand the client's actual situation before naming any ESource product or service. Jumping to a solution before diagnosis is a routing error.

CrashScan ≠ Product Launcher

A CrashScan does not automatically lead to The Product Launcher. Each engagement is evaluated on its own merits. Do not assume a natural upsell path.

The Routing Question

Ask: What is the client trying to accomplish, and what is getting in the way? The answer to that question – not the size of the opportunity – determines the path.

Approved Phrase: "The client problem determines the ESource path."

What You Bring. What ESource Brings.

This is a trusted-adviser extension model — not a commission-only product catalog. Each side of the partnership contributes what the other cannot replicate.

What You Bring

→ Relationships

Earned trust and existing access to decision-makers

→ Context

Discovery, situational awareness, and client history

→ Judgment

Knowing when a problem is real and when ESource is the right fit

What ESource Brings

→ Products & Methods

Defined offerings, proven methodologies, and delivery infrastructure

→ Proposals & Contracts

Scope, pricing, legal agreements, and commercial terms

→ Delivery & Support

Execution, expert staffing, and ongoing client support

Established Credibility Since 1994

ESource has operated for over three decades. That institutional credibility travels with you into every client conversation — you are not introducing an unknown quantity.

Routing Drill – Your Turn

Routing accuracy is a live skill. This drill is designed to surface gaps before they appear in a real client conversation. Complete all three steps with your instructor before moving forward.

1 Describe a Client Situation

Speak a real or hypothetical client scenario aloud to your instructor. Include the client's role, their stated problem, and any context you have about what is getting in the way.

2 Name the ESource Path and Explain Why

Identify whether the situation routes to ESource AI Group or ESource Execution Partners. State your reasoning explicitly – do not just name the business.

3 Run the Two-Scenario Drill

Ask your instructor to present two contrasting client scenarios. Practice routing each one in real time and receive immediate feedback on your reasoning.

 Ask your instructor to run the two-scenario routing drill with you now before proceeding to the next section.

SPIN Is a Conversation Discipline

SPIN is not a script. It is a framework for structuring discovery so that the client — not the partner — arrives at the value of ESource involvement. Choose questions that fit the conversation. Do not force every question into every interaction.

S — Situation

Understand the client's base, roles, and context. Establish facts before surfacing problems.

P — Problem

Surface gaps in capacity, visibility, or AI readiness. Let the client name the difficulty.

I — Implication

Help the prospect feel the cost of staying where they are. Implications make problems urgent.

N — Need-Payoff

Let the prospect articulate the value of having ESource behind them. They sell themselves.

Key Discipline: Choose questions that fit. Do not force every question into every conversation. A natural SPIN conversation feels like curiosity, not interrogation.

The Six-Step Opportunity Process

Recognize a Relevant Client Problem

Identify where ESource capability meets a real client need.

Conduct Discovery

Use structured questioning before positioning any solution.

Position the Correct ESource Path

Route to AI Group or Execution Partners — do not blend.

Register the Opportunity

Obtain written lead acceptance before any client commitment.

Bring the Appropriate ESource People In

Introduce the right resources without over-promising.

Allow ESource to Own Delivery

Scope, pricing, and contracts belong to ESource alone.

The Partner Authority Ladder

Authority levels are earned sequentially. Each level requires demonstrated readiness and, beyond Referral, explicit written authorization. Authority is never assumed based on interest alone.

1	Referral The starting point for every partner. Identify and introduce qualified opportunities to ESource.
2	Authorized Sales Unlocked after completion of training and certification. Enables active positioning of ESource offerings.
3	Co-Sell Follows demonstrated judgment and written authorization. Partner participates in the sales process alongside ESource.
4	Resell A potential future stage requiring full certification and a written resell agreement. Not available at program entry.

⊗ Authority is never assumed based on interest alone. Each level requires explicit qualification and, beyond Referral, written authorization from ESource.

Four Questions You Will Hear

Do I need to be an AI expert?

No. Accurate positioning and discovery matter more than technical AI knowledge.

Will ESource take over my relationship?

No. You retain the relationship; ESource owns delivery, defined upfront.

Is this just a referral program?

It starts there. It can grow into Authorized Sales, Co-Sell, and Resell.

Do I get territory or exclusivity?

No. Any such rights require explicit documentation in a written agreement.

Approved Language and Hard Limits

Language precision protects the client, ESource, and you. The phrases below are approved because they are accurate. The prohibited claims below are prohibited because they cannot be substantiated or authorized.

Approved Phrases – Use These

"You bring the relationship.
ESource brings the capability."

"We diagnose before prescribing."

"The client problem determines the ESource path."

Hard Limits – Never Claim

- Guaranteed income or earnings projections
- Guaranteed ROI for the client
- Territory or geographic exclusivity
- Automatic leads or pipeline commitments
- Pricing, security specifications, or product functionality outside approved materials

⊗ A partner does not represent themselves as an ESource employee unless expressly and explicitly authorized in writing. This applies in all client-facing contexts including email, LinkedIn, and verbal introductions.

SPIN Role-Play – Your Turn

Choose Your Scenario

Select recruiting a partner or qualifying a client opportunity.

Speak Your Discovery Questions Aloud

Work through SPIN questions with natural, unscripted delivery.

Instructor Responds as the Prospect

Adapt your questions based on what your instructor says.

Request an Assessment

Ask for feedback on question quality and routing decision.

- Ask your instructor to run the SPIN role-play with you now before proceeding to the knowledge check.

Optional Knowledge Check

A self-assessment is available to help you gauge your readiness before your first live client conversation. It is entirely private — nothing is recorded, nothing is reported to ESource or your instructor.

What It Covers

Routing Logic

Can you correctly identify which ESource business fits a given client situation? This is the highest-risk area in live client conversations.

Approved Language

Can you distinguish approved phrases from prohibited claims? Language errors in the field carry real consequences for the client relationship and for ESource.

Why Take It

Routing logic and approved language are the two highest-risk areas in live client conversations. A quick self-assessment now is far less costly than a routing error in front of a client.

Take it now if you want a quick self-assessment before your first conversation. It is optional — but recommended for every partner before their first client-facing interaction.

You Are Ready to Begin

One Action

Identify one or two clients where the routing logic genuinely applies.

One Check

Ask your instructor for clarity before your first client conversation.

One Standard

You bring the relationship. ESource brings the capability.
